The American family unit is in the process of change. In the first half of the 20th century, there were mainly two types of families: the extended and the nuclear. An extended family includes mother, father, children and some other relatives, living in the same house. A nuclear family is composed of just parents and children living under the same roof.

At present, 55% of the families in the US are nuclear families. But besides the two types of traditional family groupings, the family is now being expanded to include a variety of other living arrangements because of divorce. There is an increase in single-parent families, in which a father or mother lives with one or more children. Divorce has also led to blended families, which occur when previously married men and women marry again and combine the children from former marriage into a new family.

17. A nuclear family is one that _____.

A. a house with one roof                      B. a house with the roof the same as the wall
C. in the same building                      D. under the house

19. How many types of families have there been in the US since the first half of the 20th century?

A. Two                      B. Three                      C. Four                      D. Five

20. A blended family is a newly-formed family _____.

A. with the combination of children of the two previously married father and mother
B. that has only father or mother living with children
C. in which there are no children
D. that there is only one couple living in with their newborn children
